order to learn from him, whether he had also noticed what was going on. He, however, did not think it wise of him perhaps, to say yea or nay to my questions and only smiled for once. Then I called back to memory, the celestial Prince-of-Wales incident, and my inference was, that our Prince experienced this very same phenomenon when he said that the moon was pulling him by his hind-locks, I tried to find out next, if it was possible for me to arrive at any reasonable scientific explanation of this curious occurrence. I thought that the moon must have grazed past the sphere of activity of some bigger and more powerful planet, while moving in space and my wonder and amaze-ment knew no bounds. I tried to fix the rime and the date of occurrence in my memory in order to verify my experience, in comparison with that of the outside world, relative to that particular night, and in the meantime our silver queen began to re-appear slowly and gradually, in just the same way that it had vanished.
